night by Senators Lodge and Smoot and Representatives Fess and Gillett, chairman Scott Ferris (Okla.) of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committer hus issued a long statement designed to prove that Democrats passed the war measures demanded by the President. He inid particular emphasis on the yete on the shipping bill, which 160 Re-publicans and one Democrat opposed in he House, and twenty-one Republican Senators and none of the Democratic brand opposed in the Senate. This Reublican opposition came from a love for the coastwise shipping trust and tied the hands of the President, according to

Told of this attack Republican leaders wanted to know if the Democratic party would attempt to take legislative action on the period when the Democratic party was using as its party slogan "He kept us out of the war" as votes on war

Clark Also Defended.

The Ferris statement also defended Speaker Clark, who vigorously opposed selective draft despite the appeal of the President. On the final vote, Mr. Ferris pointed out, the Speaker did not opose the measure. Republicans in answer to this argument declared that it was an altogether honest one, as the rest came on the so-called "Kahn amendment." and they recalled also that Champ Clark made a speech in oppo-sition to the draft, comparing conscripts with convicts. Representative Ferris went back to the civil war and the Spanish war for justifying precedents for President Wilson's appeal for a Congress of his own political faith

It was the martyred Lincoln who in asking the election of a friendly Congress urged the people not to swap horses while crossing a stream," he said. Republican leaders had the answer pat for this argument. It was the same inceln who had to continually fight a "copperhead" and disloyal minority instead of one which consistently and loyally upheld him in all of his war moves. they said, as has been the case with the present Republican minority to Congress and President Wilson. Mr. Ferris also cited the fact that during the Spanish war the same appeal was made when an election came along. The same answer practically was made by Resublicans. McKinley faced a bitter opposition party in Congress, and by pointed out also that it was not fr. McKiniey himself in the role of resident of the United States and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy who issued the appeal at that time.

The Ferris statement was particularly witter to Senator Lodge because of the fact that he joined in the appeals for be election of Republican majorities during the Spanish war and now opposes some of the President's political ideas.
